The Scandal of Grace

The workers who bore "the day's burden and the heat" have a complaint that sounds entirely reasonable to us: those who came at the last hour received the same wage. It isn't fair. And they are right — it isn't fair. It is something better than fair. It is generous.

That is the scandal at the center of this parable. We instinctively measure God's gifts the way we measure wages: earned, proportioned, deserved. But the landlord asks the pointed question that unsettles all such accounting: "Are you envious because I am generous?" God does not deal with us as an employer settling a payroll. He deals with us as a Father who delights to give.

Isaiah prepares us for this. "My thoughts are not your thoughts, nor are your ways my ways, says the Lord." We keep trying to shrink God down to the size of our fairness. The Gospel keeps enlarging our idea of God until it is big enough to be good news for the latecomer, the prodigal, the deathbed convert — and, when we are honest, for us.

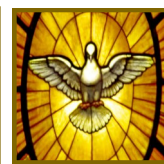

There is real freedom here. If salvation were a wage, we would spend our lives anxiously checking whether we had earned enough. Because it is a gift, we can spend our lives instead in gratitude, working in the vineyard not to be paid but because we love the One who called us.

Where are you still keeping score with God — or with a brother or sister whose blessings you have counted against your own?

OCLA ~ Brother (Sister), are you Saved?

Sessions are on Wednesdays - 6:30pm in the St. Jude & St. Michael classrooms.
