The Distance between Yes and Amen

A father asks two sons to work in his vineyard. The first refuses — and then goes. The second says the right words — "Yes, sir" — and never moves. Jesus asks which one did the father's will, and the answer is obvious. It is also uncomfortable, because most of us are fluent in the language of the second son.

It is easy to say yes to God. We say it in our prayers, in our hymns, in the answers we give when someone asks whether faith matters to us. The harder thing is the going: the quiet, unglamorous obedience that carries our yes out into an actual afternoon of actual work. Jesus is not impressed by well-spoken intentions. He looks for the son who, having said no, repents and shows up.

This is deeply hopeful. The first son's story tells us that a bad beginning is not the end. A refusal can be reversed. Ezekiel says the same: when the wicked turn from their sin, "they shall surely live." Our past resistance does not disqualify us. What matters is where we turn now.

Saint Paul shows us the shape that turning takes: the mind of Christ, who "emptied himself" and became obedient. Real conversion always bends toward humility and service. It is less about finding the perfect words for God and more about letting him rearrange our days.

Is there a place in your life where you have said yes to the Lord but not yet gone? What would it look like, this week, to actually go?
