All Soul's Day

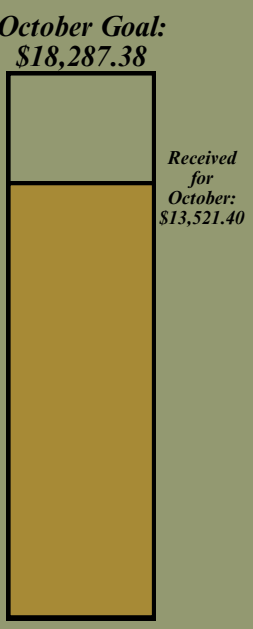

A well-loved Protestant preacher related how, on the day his father died, he said his night prayers as usual. He prayed for his father as he always did. His mother overheard his prayer and said, "We must not do that, son. We are not Catholics." The preacher told how he "immediately felt as if a grill of iron had been lowered between him and his father by his mother's words." He knew with deep assurance that she was wrong. Her words "separated him from his father even more severely than death itself had done" (recounted in Peter Kreeft, From Calvinist to Catholic, 140).

God's Love breaks through the barriers of death. The bonds uniting us are not severed by death. These ties of love and affection continue in Christ, who, through His death and resurrection, overcomes death in us too. Death is a terrible thing. Sometimes it does seem like a grill of iron separating us from those we love. But death has been changed forever by Christ's saving death. The iron bars have been shattered, the prison opened, the dead set free, and those who mourn are comforted.

When someone dies, we grieve and suffer, but we can help them on their way to God: "It is never too late to touch the heart of another, nor is it ever in vain . . . The souls of the dead receive 'solace and refreshment' through the Eucharist, prayer, and almsgiving." It was always the Church's conviction that Love "continues beyond the limits of death" (Benedict XVI, Spe Salvi, 48). Saint Monica knew this when she requested, "all I ask is that you remember me at the altar of God, wherever you may be." This remembrance is primarily in the Eucharistic Sacrifice where the dead are never forgotten; where the blessings of Christ's sacrifice are applied anew to them—for the Mass is always offered for the living and the dead. To have Holy Mass offered for those who have gone before us is the best way of helping them enter fully into the presence of God. At Mass, we are closest to them.
